YOUR HEALTH INFORMACION PRIVACY RIGHTS

Most of us feel that our health information is private and should be protected. That is why there is a federal law that rules for health care provider and health insurance companies about who can look and receive our health information. This law, called Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (HIPPA), gives you rights over your health information including the right to get a copy of your information, make sure it is correct and known who has it.

Get It.
You can ask to see or get a copy of your medical record and other health information. If you want a copy, you may have to put your request in writing and pay pro the cost of copying and mailing. In most cases, your copies must be given to you within 30 days.

Check It.
You can ask to change any wrong information in your file or add information to your file if you think something is missing or incomplete. For example, if you and your hospital agree that your file has the wrong results for a test, the hospital must change it. Even if the hospital believes the test results is correct, you still have the right to have disagreement noted in your file. In most cases, the record should be updated within 60 days.

Know Who Has Seen It.
By law, your health information can be used and shared by specific reasons not directly related to your care, like making sure doctors give good care, making sure nursing homes are clean and safe, reporting when is in your area or reporting as required by state or federal law. In many of these cases, you can find out who has seen your health information. You can:

- Learn how your health information is used and shared by your doctor or health insurer. Generally, your health information cannot be used for purposes not directly related to your care without your permission. For example, you doctor cannot give it to your employer, or share it for things like marketing and advertising, without your written authorization. You probably received a notice telling you how your health information may be used on your first visit to a new health care provider or when you got a new health insurance, but you can ask for another copy anytime.

- Let your providers or health insurance companies know if there is information you do not want to share. You can ask that your health information not be shared with certain people, groups or companies. If you go to a clinic, for example, you can ask the doctor not to share your medical records with other doctors or nurses at the clinic. You can ask for other kinds of restrictions, but they do not always have to agree to do what you ask, particularly if it could affect your care. Finally, you can also ask your health care provider or pharmacy no to tell your health insurance company about care you receive or drugs you take, if you pay for the care of drugs in full and the Provider or pharmacy does not need to get paid by your insurance company.

- Ask to be reached somewhere other than home. You can make reasonable requests to be contacted at any different places or in a different way. For example, you can ask to have nurse call you at your office instead of your home or to send mail to you in an envelop instead of on a postcard.

If you think your rights are being denied or your health information is not being protected, you have the right to file a complaint with your provider, health insurer, or the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.
